

BUILDING A BALANCE

Families must juggle many components in several domains of their lives as they continue to adjust to the special health care needs of their child. Likewise, youth must do the same while they address their own health care needs and move toward transition from one system to another. The graphic below shows only a few of the components and areas families and youth must address along this journey.

